Charlotte will talk about some of the marine life that she has encountered whilst exploring the (mainly Cornish) rockpools and what you might find on the shore if you just look a little bit closer...

Having holidayed on the North Cornish coast since her childhood, in 2016 Charlotte joined in an extreme rockpool ramble led by Matt Slater (Marine Conservation Officer, Cornwall Wildlife Trust.) This led her on a journey of discovery & learning. As well as her own exploration of the shore, Charlotte has taken part in every CWT Shoresearch Week survey since 2019. She was the very surprised recipient of the 2023 Marsh Volunteer Award for Marine Conservation - a national award which recognises the outstanding contribution made by volunteers to marine conservation in the UK
